The end of the hose, the bright-yellow Hozelock bit which has to attach to the tap, Sally decides, has a surprisingly phallic shape.

Before she stands, almost without thinking, she brushes the dusty thing between her legs. Now standing, she has a closer look at it, finding the end no longer dusty but glistening, as if some old water had become dislodged and dripped out. She feels between her legs, wondering whether the thing might have somehow leaked on to her there, upside down.

Just for the hell of it she presses her index finger inside herself again. Though this time she is wet, at least moist, and she realizes she must have leaked onto the Hozelock and not the other way around.

It's still not past nine in the morning, though the weather says it should be much nearer noon, and, hot and sweaty and oddly damp between her legs, Sally uncoils the hose, carrying the attachment over to the side return where the outside tap is, not being able to resist brushing it between her legs again before having to shove it on to the tap. Though this time she doesn't just brush it between her legs but pushes the tip into her vagina, not caring how dirty the end might be, not caring that the end might have spent the winter gathering dirt and dust in the shed all on its own. A sad, dried-up garden hose thingy.

I'm naked at the computer; he's in the kitchen washing the dishes and whistling. I like noise when I'm writing — I like a racket. He puts on a CD and I, still writing, find myself moving my hips and making my revolving chair move back and forth. The curtains aren't closed yet and the windows are high, typical of a seventeenth-century palazzo. Everybody can see us, and we're happy for anyone to watch us making love. Perhaps that's typical of people in love: showing everyone you love each other. I wander along the corridor, brushing the walls with my finger. I enter the sitting room and stroke the bonsai tree, standing on tiptoes. He has his back to me, and I wrap my arms around his chest and start rubbing my pelvis against him. I turn him resolutely around, look at him coyly, aware that I've made a movement he likes. I turn around, rub my ass against him, and he delicately strokes my back; I sit down on the edge of the cold, wet sink, the contact makes my whole skin shiver, and my body swells upward. BLOG-A-LOG

The wait is over. Welcome That_Darn_Cat!

How To Play

Ladies and Gentlemen, we at Nerve have selected six bloggers who are clever, fearless and foolish enough to spread out their Nerve Personals dating adventures before you like a brunch buffet. The catch is that you, the Nerve readers, will control their fates. We ask that you not only give the bloggers dating advice in the feedback section but also rate their blogs on an ongoing basis from 1-10. After six weeks, the blogger with the lowest overall rating will pack their bags, so to speak, and a new blogger will enter the mix. Be fair and be cool because, remember. It ain't easy out there. Enjoy the ride ...

I thought about bringing up the friend who slept with her second husband the night of her first husband's funeral, but I guessed that was a random thing, and let it go.
— We're both a little bereft right now, I said.
— This isn't about that.
— No?
— No.
Mike slowly pulled my nightgown up.
— I know how to draw kitchen triangles, I offered.

Hart rubbed his black sock against my bare foot and then ran his big toe up my shin to about my knee. Unfortunately he spoke. "You hot little tomato you." I smiled sweetly again. I closed my eyes and thought about my non-existent nineteen-year-old boyfriend with the muscular arms and the jeans and the picture in his wallet poking out of a hole in the back pocket of his jeans. Hart started rubbing my belly like I was a kid with a stomachache (which come to think of it I was, getting there, anyway), and then moved his hand down to my public hair, hesitated for one brief dramatic moment and plunged one of his skinny white fingers into my vagina. Sigh. That area taken care of for the time being, he proceeded to move up to my breasts. Like switching on a car. Ignition, wipers, radio, okay we're ready to go!

I could see him with a long pointer pointing to a pie on the blackboard. Attend to bottom half of woman, then, moving the marker, from there proceed to top half, maintaining pressure on bottom, until all lights on dash are on. Contact! Proceed to drive. He started to kiss his way up from my bellybutton to my right breast, stopping briefly to lick the hard flat area in between my breasts. ...read more

"Okay," Marqueese whispered. He grabbed his penis and aimed it at Robin's crotch. Hendrix stopped singing, the arm of the player lifted, and the record started again. Robin put her hands on top of Marqueese's head, over his thin, dark hair, and he slid his dick inside her. There was a slight hesitation, some pressure, and then he seemed to be working around in the middle of her stomach, like a finger in a baseball glove. Once, smiling, her grandmother had whispered to her: all the boys want just one thing.

Marqueese picked up speed. Wopp, wopp, went Hendrix's guitar. One afternoon, years ago, Robin and Kitty had hidden in the sumac that ringed the edge of the Simonsens' property and touched each other. Now, Robin couldn't remember Kitty's fingers on her, or her voice. What she did recollect was that it had been fall and the sumac had turned red, and she and Kitty had been together under a line of flames. "Uh," Marqueese said. Then: "Uh. Uh. Uh." On the eastern edge of the Simonsen property, behind the bus, ran a trickle of water that sometimes became a creek of melted snow or storm water. When the creek was high, Robin and Kitty would wade side by side looking for leeches and for the sick goldfish dumped upstream, which sailed down the current on beds of leaves and twigs and candy wrappers.
